LG CHEM ↗

For commercial interiors and special furniture Hi-macs is a solid surface material offering designers unlimited scope to create flowing, single piece shapes and eye-catching focal points. The natural acrylic stone is easily machined, formed and seamlessly joined. Hi-macs is available in a fascinating range of colours, textures and effects as seen here along the bar area of the White House nightclub in Clapham.

LINLEY ↘

British design company Linley has created their own 'Modulor Man' in the form of a mirror, to celebrate 'Le Corbusier - the Art of Architecture', currently showing at the Barbican, London. The mirror stands 175cm tall, true to the dimensions of Corbusier's sketch of the Modulor Man and is made of 6mm glass mounted on black board. The Mirror is available from both the Pimlico and Mayfair Linley stores in London.

DESSO ↘

Desso has launched its first 'Cradle to Cradle' (C2C) product with the carpet tile Palla and has two more products ready for launch later this year. Cradle to Cradle means that products should be developed with the intention that they will eventually be recycled, as either industrial or biological nutrients, reducing energy costs and the expense of wasting new raw materials. Pallas carpet tiles have been part of the Desso collection for many years and now comply with the Basic EPEA certification requirement.
